Fresh Hair

27 Hampton Salon goes 100 percent chemical-free with their products.

When 27 Hampton Salon owner Bianka Lefferts started paying attention to the ingredients in the products she carried, it inspired in her a new philosophy. "Our clients work out, eat organic food, and take care of themselves," says Lefferts, "so why put all these chemicals in your hair if you don't have to?"

Lefferts's research revealed a whole slate of companies devoted to creating formulas free of silicon, parabens, and sulfates, including the French family-owned Leonor Greyl, the new venture R+Co, and Orbe. All of those brands are now on her shelves, and Lefferts could not be happier with the results. "I'm on a mission now to save the world with beauty," she says.

What's the secret to her perfect skin? I used one of my favorite foundations from Giorgio Armani; it has great coverage but a natural finish. Her cheekbones! We're obsessed.

We make sure to accentuate them with a bit of contouring.

What does she love to play up? Ashley always wants to have a full brow. It's the most important thing to her, so we draw just slightly above her natural browline.

What's your getting-ready process? We've been working together about six years, and it's always fun. We listened to Beyoncé and Iggy Azalea. Why this style? When I saw Ashley's white Alexander McQueen dress, I knew her hair had to be down, tousled and sexy. We bet she loved the look. I texted her the next day and said, "Can we just talk about how gorgeous you were last night?"

LOOK of the DAY

It's official: Nicola Peltz is our new red carpet obsession. At the New York City premiere of "Affluenza," the actress wore a bold one-sleeve piece from Louis Vuitton with a mod cat eye and side-swept waves.

Working with Leonor Greyl products, hairstylist Adir Abergel punched up Peltz's hairstyle by pinning one section off to the side. To get the look, Abergel prepped her towel-dried hair with Leonor Greyl Condition Naturelle, $36, from roots to ends to create volume while protecting the hair from heat.

To give the volume staying power, Abergel added Leonor Greyl Mousse au Lotus Volumatrice, $46, to the roots, then created a deep side part placed at the highest arch of one brow. Working section by section, Abergel blew the hair dry, wrapped it around medium size Velcro rollers and allowed it to cool.

Once the rollers were removed, he teased the hair at the crown of the head, spraying with Leonor Greyl Laque Souple, $36. To accentuate the side part, Abergel pulled one side off her face (almost into a half updo) and secured it with bobby pins. Finally, he took a large curling iron to random sections of hair to add texture.

We're calling it—the intricate, interwoven braid-within-a-braid Diane Kruger wore to the West Hollywood premiere of The Bridge is officially the Inception of all hairstyles, and we can't wait to try our hand at the effect. While it seems complicated at first glance, you can master the look by simply breaking it down section by section. Kruger's hairstylist Kylee Heath began by working the Leonor Greyl Spray Structure Naturelle ($38; leonorgreyl-usa.com) from her roots to her ends breaking it down section by section. Kruger's hairstylist Kylee Heath began by working the Leonor Greyl Spray Structure Naturelle ($38; leonorgreyl-usa.com) from her roots to her ends to form a solid foundation, then rough-dried her hair before starting on the first plait. "I created a part from the top of the left about two and a half inches were left, I secured with a clear rubber band, and lightly loosened up the plait." A few face-framing tendrils were pulled out in the front, and to finish, a final mist of Kevin Murphy Strong Hold Hairspray ($25; kevinmurphy.com for locations) kept the look in place.

Braids may have been around forever, but every now and again, hairstylists surprise us with a completely new twist on the plait. Diane Kruger, who has never been one to disappoint when it comes to hair on the red carpet, just showed off one of the coolest braided hairstyles we've ever seen, so we ran to her stylist for the details. The braid-within-a-braid, above, may look complicated, but luckily, her stylist Kylee Heath of The Wall Group gave us the details on her look at the premiere of "The Bridge."

First, Kylee sprayed Leonor Greyl Spray Structure Naturelle from roots through ends and rough dried the hair, blowing it in all directions. Then, she created a part from the top of the left ear straight over the head, to the top of the right ear. Breaking the section into two, she created a center part and clipped away both sections. Starting at the back of the center part, she then created two partings creating a triangle section in the back.

unclipped. Doing an inside out French braid (basically a cornrow) on the triangle section, she then secured the hair at the base of the neck with a clear rubber band. Next, she took down the clipped away sections and teased the roots for volume. Lightly pulling the sections back, she created a loose French braid over the top of the triangle sectioned cornrow. The braiding continued until there was about two and a half inches left, where she secured the hair with a clear elastic and lightly loosened the braid before finishing with hairspray.

How do you care for your hair?

I like Leonor Grey for blondes and for breakage, like if you're out in the sun during the summer, put it in your hair and let it sit—put your sunglasses on and pull it all up in a bun and you're good to go. I think blondes have to moisturize more and they should more often, but they're so afraid of looking oily.

hair by Marki Shkreli for Leonor Greyl; wrap your head around it. "Hair color got so literal—green, purple, pink," says Hunter, whose New York salon, Whittemore House, has a big model following. "It's fresher to make something you can't get straight out of a tube."

To that end, she layered multiple dyes onto wet, bleached hair to create the aforementioned pale pink, as well as a pearly silver, a dusty ginger, a muted champagne, and a pink mauve similar to the one seen here. "It's no longer about color," she says of the deliberately washed-out palette. "It's a tonal revolution." KATIE BECKER

Summer Beauty Travel Essentials

by Ageist Beauty on July 5, 2014 with 0 Comments in General Beauty , Travel

Traveling is one of my favorite pastimes. Whenever we can, we hit the road. However, my husband has a bit of an irrational concern with checking bags. He doesn't like waiting in baggage claim, he likes to be more "agile" in the airport, he does like looking too "touristy", yada, yada, yada. As such, I have become well-trained in the art of packing minimal clothing and beauty products, that still allow for maximum function. Below are some of the products that are at the top of my list as I pack for my upcoming 3-week jaunt to Europe.

JANE IREDALE POWDER BRUSH REFILL-ME BRUSH ($35) – This handy, all-in-one refillable loose powder brush allows for easy and mess-free application of your favorite Jane Iredale loose mineral powder, loose finishing powder or sunscreen on-the-go. REACH COMPLETE CARE TRIPLE ANGLE FLOSS TOOTHBRUSH ($4.79) – A healthy smile is key to feeling beautiful. When I'm on vacation, I'm all about multi-tasking products and this toothbrush, while not entirely replacing the need for floss, is more effective at removing plaque from between teeth and along the gum line than any other toothbrush I have used.

TEODORA RAINFOREST AT DARK NOURISHING SHAMPOO ($35) – Natural, sustainably-harvested ingredients such as acai, buriti and cupuacu butter are combined to create this luxurious shampoo that leaves your hair shiny, soft and healthy whether post fun in the sun, city sightseeing or anywhere in-between.

HOW THE FRENCH CELEBRATE BASTILLE DAY

Posted by Charu 07.14.14

Akin to our Independence Day, Bastille Day—July 14—officially known as French National Day, celebrates the success of the French Revolution, particularly the storming of the Bastille, a prison/fort that housed political prisoners. That event paved the road to France becoming a republic and the famous slogan: Liberté, Égalité, Fraternité. In France, the day is commemorated with the country's oldest military parade, and Francophiles around the globe raise a glass a don a beret in celebration.

In addition to revolution, the French knack for beauty is appreciated far beyond the country's doors. Here are some French beauty products that we love deserve to be worn during this unique celebration:

Lancôme 'Juicy Tubes Jelly' Ultra Shiny Lip Gloss ($18)

I adore Juicy Tubes from this iconic French brand, and this is an ideal lip gloss to use during the summer months because it feels as moisturizing on your lips as it looks. The "Ultra Shiny Lip Gloss" has a beautiful sheen to it, and is a far cry from tacky. It comes in many fireworks-like colors (6), so choose away.

Leonor Greyl Huile de Palme ($52)

This upscale Parisian brand is so luxurious that once you use this palm oil you will feel as though your hair has become a Republic, and quite independent of any of your other features. The smell is addicting, and I like to use it as a pre-wash conditioner and mask for 15 minutes and then shampoo it off. You can also use this (just a drop will do) on dry hair to tame frizzies. Whichever option you choose, the smell will leave you longing for the next go around. It also protects your hair color too. Coco by Chanel ($110)

Leonor Greyl: Huile de Leonor Greyl

Oh my does this smell delightful! Huile de Leonor Greyl ($ 57) now replaces Huile de Palme yet still retains the same qualities and ingredients with refined copra oil from cold pressed coconut kernels and mongongo oil which is extracted from the nuts of an African tree that grows in the Kalahari Desert. The ingredients in this iconic product help protect your hair from environmental damage as well as containing hydrating powers that protects your hair from everyday free radicals.

This is a pre-shampoo oil treatment especially designed for dry hair. It was formulated to protect your hair from the sun and water and to also keep your hair color in place. I have all three challenges and the fact that it contains natural UVA/B protection is a PLUS!

This iconic product had merely been reinvented and Palm Oil is no longer in the formula but has allowed the two new ingredients to be added. Everything has changed, yet nothing had changed. It had the same texture, fragrance and color. The legendary product has retained all of the same qualities since it's creation in 1971- it has just been rechristened.

What The Savvy Parisians Use: French Chic Summer Beauty Picks

French Chic Summer Beauty Picks...

It almost seems like an oxymoron to call French Chic Summer Beauty sensible.

But it really is.

There's a very logical, edited, and precise way that Parisians approach their beauty. It's all about the ease of effortlessly looking better than natural, with a few savvy secrets thrown in for good measure.

I've pulled a few new and timeless French Chic beauté favorites for you to consider adding to your routine this summer. They are all available stateside (just click on their name) so no need to whisk to Paris, but wouldn't that be divine?

L'Huile De Leonor Greyl - Soin Naturel du Cheveu smells so delicious that you'll want to douse yourself in this lovely oil but it really is a waterproof serum-like formula to protect your hair from the sun and dry split ends. Don't tell, but I cheat and rub my hands with it. I don't know if it does anything, but it feels so good. Leonor Greyl is also one of my favorite French hair care brands.

Talika Skin Retouch for face, hands, and neck is derived from photo-retouching techniques to instantly light and add a petite anti-aging savoir faire to your skin.

Orlane Paris Aqua Svelte Slimming Scrub with Algae and Sea Salt. I'll scrub like mad in an effort to be svelte. And this smells so refreshing and energizing while it detoxifies, exfoliates, and fights cellulite while making you feel like you spent a day at the sea. Bliss.

Talika Huile Vitale is a nighttime oil (or no makeup day oil) to restore dehydrated skin. Perfect for after a long flight (to Paris?) or a day in the sun. I'm becoming addicted to this since I swear it puffed out my dehydrated crinkles over night.

Packing, it should be known, is editing. You are carefully selecting the belongings that you've deemed most suitable (and most stylish) for a trip where you will be away from home and the comfort of all your many possessions. For fashion, you can prepare for good weather or bad fairly easy. But when it comes to beauty, the forecast is only so revealing when it comes to possible breakouts, bad hair days, or chipped nails.

So when you prepare your things for a summer weekend, we want you to play the role of editor. Don't worry about which mascara—just take your favorite and pack a lash curler. And as for your hair? A multi-

If your hair tends to get super dry after a day on the beach, Atkin insists on Leonor Greyl Huile Secret de Beauté. "You can use it on both your body and face," she says. Put a couple drops in your palms, rub together, then rake it through your lengths, starting at the ends. It will hydrate, provide shine, and even soften and separate your style.

One Product That Does Everything — Really

Being a beauty editor turned me into a product junkie. On any given day I might use at least five products in my hair, twice that on my face. Frankly, it's fun—until summer hits. My powder room's uninhabitable once the temperature reaches 100, meaning I need one product that does everything. A crazy beauty dream? Sure. But I found something close.

Leonor Grey's Huile Secret de Beaute ($66) is a lightweight mix of natural vegetable oils that moisturizes my skin, enhances my tan, and bestows a glow on my face, while nourishing and de-frizzing my hair. It also smells faintly tropical, like I just stepped off the beach (even if I just stepped out of the office). My greatest fear with oils is over-application, but this one comes in a glass spray bottle dispensing one tiny spritz at a time so you can't screw it up. Too good to be true? Nope.

Hello there! If you are new here, you might want to subscribe to the RSS feed for updates on this topic.

Traveling is one of my favorite pastimes. Whenever we can, we hit the road. However, my husband has a bit of an irrational concern with checking bags. He doesn't like waiting in baggage claim, he likes to be more "agile" in the airport, he does like looking too "touristy", yada, yada, yada. As such, I have become well-trained in the art of packing minimal clothing and beauty products, that still allow for maximum function. Below are some of the products that are at the top of my list as I pack for my upcoming 3-week jaunt to Europe.

LEONOR GREYL HUILE DE LEONOR GREYL ($52) – Many of my summer getaways involve sun, sand or chlorine (or all three). A few drops of this miracle oil moisturize, soften and protect hair from the damaging effects of sun and surf.

jane iredale POWDER BRUSH REFILL-ME BRUSH ($35) – This handy, all-in-one refillable loose powder brush allows for easy and mess-free application of your favorite jane iredale loose mineral powder, loose finishing powder or sunscreen on-the-go. The fewer items packed = more room for shopping finds. I say that's a win-win.

LEONOR GREYL HUILE DE LEONOR GREYL ($52) – Many of my summer getaways involve sun, sand or chlorine (or all three). A few drops of this miracle oil moisturize, soften and protect hair from the damaging effects of sun and surf.

REACH COMPLETE CARE TRIPLE ANGLE FLOSS TOOTHBRUSH ($4.79) – A healthy smile is key to feeling beautiful. When I'm on vacation, I'm all about multi-tasking products and this toothbrush, while not entirely replacing the need for floss, is more effective at removing plaque from between teeth and along the gum line than any other toothbrush I have used.

TEODORA RAINFOREST AT DARK NOURISHING SHAMPOO ($35) – Natural, sustainably-harvested ingredients such as acai, buriti and cupuacu butter are combined to create this luxurious shampoo that leaves your hair shiny, soft and healthy whether post fun in the sun, city sightseeing or anywhere in-between.

Ashley Greene's Gorgeous Ombre 'Lob' At 'Wish I Was Here' Premiere

Ashley Greene, 'Wish I Was Here' premiere, NYC, July 14, 2014 Kerastase Mousse Bouffante

Ashley looked stunning at the New York premiere of her new film 'Wish I Was Here,' held at the AMC Lincoln Square Theater on July 14. We spoke to her hairstylist — find out how to copy her exact look below!

Ashley Greene had us green with envy when she walked the red carpet at the NYC premiere of her new flick. Her long bob or 'lob' is perfect for summer. Find out how to copy her easy and carefree style for your next summer BBQ below!

Ashley Greene's 'Wish I Was Here' Hair — Premiere Pretty Thanks To Ted Gibson

Ashley wore a dark eye look with long lashes. Her skin was perfectly bronzed and she kept her lips neutral. Celebrity hairstylist Ted Gibson created the look below!

Ted Gibson Teaches You How To Get Ashley Greene's Hair

Ted tells HollywoodLife.com:

"I was so excited about seeing #gibsongirl Ashley today. We started off at 7:30am. She had Today with Kathie Lee and Hoda. Then she went to the premiere of her new movie called Wish I Was Here.

On wet hair, I used Leonor Grey! Condition Naturelle Heat-Protective Styling Spray on the scalp and Kerastase Mousse Bouffante on mid-lengths and ends. This combination of products really gives hair the ultimate volume and sex appeal. I used a professional blow dryer that smooths hair and gives the ultimate shine. This is important, regardless if you are going to a movie premiere or not. I love a dual bristle brush for the professional blow dry that every girl in America covets. Dry one inch sections with this round brush, smoothing out every cuticle.

After finishing the blow dry, using a ½ inch curling iron in opposite directions gives that sexy, tousled look that I am famous for. Before she walked out the door of the hotel, I had her turn her head upside down and I sprayed Elnett Hairspray normal hold at the nape. That give the big hair with texture that I love. After she flipped her head back up, I spray more hairspray and watched her walk out the door confident and ready for the red carpet!"

Will you try to get Ashley's hairstyle?

For sure!

Perfect beach hair is always coveted, but the ocean isn't always there to help. Follow celebrity hairstylist Jen Atkin's five easy steps to achieve yearlong beach-waved locks.

Apply Mousse au Lotus Volumatrice by Leonor Greyl to damp hair. This will add volume as well as being your product foundation. Then, blow dry.

This next part is what makes the look the beachy-ness that it is. Use a GHD flat iron to add a bend to the roots and smooth over the ends to soften.

Next, liberally apply Oribe Dry Texturing Spray. This will up the volume with just the right amount of gritty structure.

Replicate that wind whipped hair by piecing out the ends with Osmo Clay Wax.

6 Tricks for Styling Your Hair Without Heat

When it's 100 degrees outside, the last thing you need is another 2,000 watts of hot air aimed toward your face. To find out how to make our hair presentable in the summer's heat (without adding extra sweat from blow-dryers and curling irons), we spoke to celebrity hairstylists who have been prepping stars for their summer press junkets. Below, a few of their favorite ways not to pack heat this summer, for all hair types.

1. Try Heatless Beach Waves

Giannandrea, whose clients include Naomi Watts and Chrissy Teigen, suggests adding an oil or serum (he likes Macadamia's Heating Oil Treatment) to towel-dried hair. The hair should be slightly damp but not wet. Twist the hair into sections, and pin each section up into a loose, twisty bun. Let it sit for an hour and then unpin. This will give you beach-wave texture — the waves won't be quite as defined or obvious as if you were to use a curling or flat iron, but will give you that slight, ruffled texture. If your hair tends not to hold a curl well, add a curl-enhancing serum.

3. Keep Up the Conditioning

Conditioning is key in hot weather, because moisturized hair repels frizz. Hairstylist Adir Abergel has been prepping Transformers star Nicola Peltz for her international press-junket tour, giving her a smooth blowout even when it was 91 degrees with 71 percent humidity. He uses a conditioner like Leonor Greyl Masque Orchidee, which sets a good foundation for blow-drying. For styling, he suggests using moisture-rich products to seal in the cuticle and block out moisture.

Doesn't it always seem like no matter what you want your hair to do it does the opposite? Happy Monday. The latest crop of stylers that landed on my desk are far from ordinary. These style solutions are for rebellious hair. I mean it. Check out the latest... you can thank me later.

Problem: Dry, Brittle Strands

Solution: Leonor Greyl L'Huile De Leonor Greyl

This pre-shampoo treatment consists of a blend of copra oil and mongongo oil, which protect and regenerate your hair from the summer's elements. Think chlorine and sun. It's also great for color treated hair. Instead of working with dry, unruly tresses, say hello to hydration!
